Start Procedure

The following procedure outlines the essential steps for effective race management in accordance with Rule 26 of the Racing Rules of Sailing. This guide is designed to ensure a fair and standardized start to each race, providing clarity and consistency for both race officials and participants.

Race management is a critical component of competitive sailing, requiring precise timing, clear communication, and strict adherence to established protocols. By following this procedure, race officials can confidently manage the start of each race, ensuring that all competitors have an equal opportunity to compete under fair conditions.

This procedure includes detailed instructions for pre-race signals, timing, and post-start monitoring, emphasising the importance of visual signals and the correct use of sound signals. It serves as a comprehensive guide for race officials, helping them to execute their duties with accuracy and professionalism.

We hope this guide will be a valuable resource for race management teams, enhancing the overall quality and fairness of sailing competitions.

Voice procedures

A summary of the correct use of common terms and phrases:

(Always refer to the call sign you are calling first, followed by your call sign)

To initiate a call:	called station Call Sign (say once only) THIS IS calling station (your call sign) (say twice) OVER (this indicates you expect a reply but is not mandatory when the quality of the signal is good)
If there is no response:	Repeat initial call followed by NOTHING HEARD, OUT
To respond to a call:	Calling station call sign (them) THIS IS (your call sign), GO AHEAD
To end a call:	your call sign OUT (This means you do not expect any further response. Do not use STANDING BY)
To expect a response:	OVER (but see above)
To ask for a message to be repeated:	SAY AGAIN (REPEAT is only used to emphasise an instruction)
Acknowledge a	the preferred reply is ROMEO
Message:	.
If a calling station is unclear:	STATION CALLING your call sign, SAY AGAIN CALL SIGN ID.

Radio Protocols

RBYC shares our main working radio frequency with several other Clubs who also conduct sailing events at the same time we do. As a result, it is important that our radio operators use the facility in the most efficient and effective way.

The way to do this is to follow the procedures set down in the Marine Radio Operators Handbook – the authoritative reference for your Radio License.

Set out below are procedures and terminology which are often misused or misunderstood by radio operators.

Composing your message

In order to keep your radio traffic brief and concise, it is essential that you compose your message BEFORE pressing the transmit button. Think through how to say what you want in the briefest way. Do not use the radio for chatting or lengthy explanations – your mobile phone is better for that!

Before transmitting, listen on the working frequency to ensure that you are not cutting across other radio traffic.

Golden Rule: KEEP THE MESSAGE BRIEF AND SUCCINCT

Rescue Boat Procedure

Rescue Boats should be of adequate capability to assist boats in distress under adverse conditions. An adequate number of patrol craft should be provided. Each craft should be manned by at least two competent persons. Depending on the racing environment, Patrol boats should carry thermal blankets, water, sunscreen, seasick tablets, knife, wire-cutters and Safety Tape.

During races the rescue boat should be positioned within the top third of the course or following mid fleet as may be requested by RO.

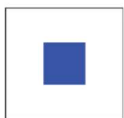

Coach Boats are also expected to act as Rescue Boats when requested by Race Committee.

The Mark Laying boat may be used as a safety boat although its main task is to stand by for alterations to the course in the event of a wind change. This vessel, like the Mark boats, is a source of information to the Course Race Officer. This boat will carry the marks it is required to lay, together with spare marks, counterweights, ropes and anchors.

Both Mark Laying boats and Pin Boats should be equipped with visual and sound signals. The flags to be carried should include Shortened Course, Missing Mark, Course Change Signals, Abandon and, if appropriate for the event, the rule 42 'switch off/switch on' signals.

Shortened Course
